SOCIAL MEDIA

APPOINTMENT SETTING

How do we do it?

These are the most basic steps to be followed in order to have a successful Lead Generation process:

Why do you want to get leads?

Simple, you want to generate appointments in order to increase your sales.

Reasons for a Lead Generation process:

- Your existing database has never been updated.
- You have lead-hungry sales teams ready to make you some money by selling through phone, but with no current data to exploit.
- You need help with meetings generated by a successful team of virtual lead generators.
- You need brand awareness and successful e-mail marketing campaigns that increase your traffic.

SET UP GOALS

Who are your clients?

You are the one who knows your business the best, and knowing your target client is crucial for stating what kind of leads you need; be sure to account those specific factors that constitute your market and build a clear profile with the information you need.

Leads are not leads if they don't have some sort of contact information for you to generate an appointment or have something in particular that interests them in your services. Ask yourself:

- What industry will I focus on?
Food, Telecommunications, Real Estate, Marketing, Staffing, etc.
- How big should my clients be?
Startups, mid-sized or large companies

Who is my buyer?

You need a decision-maker that has enough authority and is capable of purchasing your services inside the company. Ask yourself:

- What department am I trying to reach?
Marketing, Human Resources, IT, Executive Board, Business Development, International Relations, etc.
- What position suits me the best?
Chief Executive Officer, Vice-president of Information Technology, Business Development Manager, HR Executive, etc.
- What kind of information do I need?
Phone number, branch or HQ address, e-mail address, Social Media, Website, etc.

After understanding the information you are looking for, organize it in categories:

COMPANY NAME	INDUSTRY
DESCRCPTION	CORPORATE PHONE
WEB PAGE	ADDRESS
DECISION - MAKER'S NAME	DECISION - MAKER'S PHONE
DECISION - MAKER'S E-MAIL	SOCIAL MEDIA

The most accurate and yet overall definition of a lead is: someone who is interested in your business and services. That's it. No way round.

Creating a good lead generation process is an art itself: every business is unique, so are its leads. It takes time and continuous feedback from sales; without communication between the lead generator, the sales and marketing teams, it is not possible to measure the appropriate KPIs for success.

What are my KPIs?

- Number of appointments
- Conversion rate on Sales

What kind of leads do I need?

There are two types of leads you can profit from:

WARM LEADS

Leads that are interested in your business.

- Inbound e-mails
- Job postings
- Referrals
- Networking-made contacts

COLD LEADS

Leads that have not implied directly they are interested in your business, but they fit the profile you are looking for.

- Databases specifically designed based on DM
- E-mail campaigns
- Social media campaigns
- Cold call campaigns

DEFINE A LEAD

How to find leads?

What are the basic keywords I must use to identify my potential clients?

What kind of companies may be interested in my services?

Where am I going to find leads?
Geographical Industry related.

CREATE A SAMPLE FILE

Now that you realize what type of the leads you need and how to get them, create a sample file that puts all this reasoning into practice.

If the sample file doesn't work, probably the rest of the leads are going to be useless too, but if it is well-done and proves to be successful after you try it, the subsequent leads built around it should do as well.

What kind of leads do I need?

Current clients: They serve as the basis of the profile and keywords set up to begin.

Warm leads:

- Job postings that fit your services
- Companies with successful past meetings
- Old clients
- Companies with similar criteria

The sample file will be the flagship database for you to start the process and have the tools to start generating appointments.

LeadGen + Appointment Setting Sales Cycles

I already bought data bases, why should I use Lead Generation?

Some of our clients believe they have bought the perfect database but, when they start calling, they find out people no longer work in there, companies no longer exist, telephones are disconnected and no additional info on the decision maker is available to make a proper sales pitch.

The main advantage of a tailor-made lead generation process is that you get an automatized lead generation appointment-setting machine.

Keep on with the hard work and you will definitely begin to see the results of having executed a correct Lead Generation process.
